

Water changes lives

Our planet has enough fresh water for everyone. Still, 1 out of 10 doesn't have access to clean drinking water. This has major implications. Every day more than 700 children around the world die from diseases related to contaminated water. In fact, more people die from dirty water and poor sanitary conditions, than through war and violence. This is where Water for All wants to get involved and make a difference.

Clean water is a human right

Access to clean drinking water not only saves lives. It also gives people more freedom to change social structures and ultimately their own lives.

Women and children don't have to make the long and often dangerous walk to fetch water. Instead the children can spend these hours in school and women can work.

A local water supply also allows people to grow crops near their homes, produce food for their families, and even sell any surplus.

Thank you for making this a global reality!

Water for All was founded by Atlas Copco employees in 1984. Through voluntary donations, boosted by the Group, this non-profit organization has so far provided clean drinking water to close to 2 million people.
